HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

SOME OF THE WAYS PAPER IS EMPLOYED FOR DECORATION. The marvelous effects to be achieved by the use of paper decorations are being considered, and used, in all forms of entertaining. Each season new ideas are offered. Many women take lessons in the making of the table decorations, and find this makes it cheaper than to buy the finished product. The American beauty table is one of this season's prettiest ideas for luncheon or dinners. The table is covered with the paper on top, and has a deep fall of the rose petals of large size. The edges of the petals are rolled back to show just a line of the deeper pink and the top of the fall is finished with a tiny strip of paper smilax.

In the center is an immense rose, which is really a favor pie. Then there are rose, ice-cream, cake or sandwich plates, refresh and nut dishes, and butterflies poised on curled wires that may be hidden under greenery but which let the butterflies flutter in quite a natural manner. The exquisite coloring allows the use of only rose decorations to match, or white and green in natural flowers with this table.

An all-white bridal table has an immense paper slipper for a centerpiece, which is also a favor pie, and a big bridal veil with tiny bells on ribbons for a clapper is used above the table for extra decoration. A border of big white roses finishes the fall of this table, and the edge is covered with white petals formed into a narrow wreath. If preferred, a wedding chest may be used instead of the slipper, the locks and straps of which are made of gold paper, while its cover is of white.

For a children's party there is a most fascinating menagerie paper table-cloth. The flounce of animal pictures has a yellow rug on the bottom and a wee one at the head of the fall. For a centerpiece there is a marvelous merry-go-round made of yellow paper with paper animals on which paper children are riding. The entire thing is 18 inches high.

and the center is filled with prizes. Plates and other serving dishes are covered with paper lions, leopards, elephants, goats, zebras, sea lions and other remarkable food containers. Of course, the napkins match. The animals are also cut out and mounted for place-cards and other decorative uses.

The parrot paper is often used for young girls' luncheon, and it is colorful and decorative. The table is covered with green paper deeply fringed, the center is a small pepper plant with red peppers hanging on it. The birds appear in the flounce fall, and are cut and arranged in some special design on top of the table. This makes an unusual table. Poinsettias, real or of paper, may be used with the birds.

To decide a harvest, Halloween or Thanksgiving table, use two shades of yellow paper and fringe the edge of the cloth deeply. Put a large paper horn of plenty in the center filled with paper fruit. Ice-cream, serving dishes and bowls are all made to match. A big paper pumpkin, decorated with the blossoms, is passed at dessert time, and is filled with favors.

For all the tables the paper service plates may be painted with water color paints to harmonize with the other decorations. The decorations around the room can be made of paper wall panels, lattice screens, window boxes, fancy screens, tall baskets and vases of the flowers like those on the table and used for curtains or draperies of all sorts.

The effects to be gotten from the use of the papers are quite as attractive as those from silk or other materials, and are at half the price. Of course, the decorations purchased ready-made come high, but if you can learn the art of making them the price is not in the least prohibitive.

The paper tables are especially useful for persons who live in small quarters or board, yet who want to entertain occasionally in their rooms in an attractive way.
